

White Spruce

The White Spruce prefers full sun to partial shade and tolerates most soil conditions.

It has a moderate growth rate and has a mature height of 40 to 60 feet.

Wildlife such as white-tailed deer, rabbits and grouse will eat the foliage of spruces in winter and it provides shelter from the weather. Spruces are also used for Christmas trees.